LINGUISTICS

Course Description:

Introduction to the theory and methodology of general linguistics; includes the various branches and applications of linguistics. This course satisfies the General Education Criteria for: Social and Behavioral Sciences (Social Sciences).

Do you think humans are unique in their ability to communicate? Are you interested in languages? Ever wonder how writers came up with the realistic feel of Dothraki, High Valyrian, and Elvish?

In this course, you will learn the basics of phonetics, phonology, syntax, semantics, pragmatics, sociolinguistics, and historical linguistics: the fundamentals of what makes language (supposedly) unique to our species.

The course is presented in a fun and engaging style, with a sometimes wacky but always affable host and a supporting cast of terrific TAs.
